Same Store Sales Growth

- The COVID-19 situation and the volatile macro environment continued to weigh on the retail demand in Mainland China and Hong Kong and Macau during the Quarter. An encouraging sequential improvement in SSS was shown in Mainland China when compared to last quarter as business resumed. Therefore, SSS decline in Mainland China narrowed to 11.2%, where Hong Kong and Macau recorded a SSS decline of 72.5% and 93.2%, respectively.
- In Mainland China, SSS of gem-set / platinum / k-gold jewellery category dropped by 6.6%, while its RSV increased 10.1% during the Quarter. SSS of gem-set / platinum / k-gold jewellery category in Hong Kong and Macau decreased by 65.7% during the Quarter as consumer traffic remained weak. In Mainland China, same store Average Selling Price (“ASP”) of gem-set jewellery was HK$6,000 (1QFY2020: HK$5,900) while that of Hong Kong and Macau was HK$13,100 (1QFY2020: HK$10,900).
- Gold jewellery and products category which includes those selling by weight and at fixed-price recorded a volume decline as a result of gold price volatility, dragging SSS in both markets. ASP of gold jewellery and products was HK$4,300 (1QFY2020: HK$3,900) in Mainland China. Yet, ASP in Hong Kong and Macau declined to HK$5,200 (1QFY2020: HK$6,600), mainly due to the shift of sales mix towards higher-margin fixed-price gold products during the Quarter. The average international gold price in the Quarter was 30.7% higher when compared to the same period last year.
